THE DOOR TO SUCCESS....

Quasar, is only too well aware of how essential a role veneer plays in creating a charming, aesthetically-pleasing decorative element. The company provides a striking range of designs and colours, and has now launched a new range of doors designed to complement our veneer panels. While doors might often go unnoticed, its Quasar's aim that it's new door range - the Flame range - will be a talking point in any house!

The company strongly believes that a beautiful door can make a big difference, as well as create a dramatic effect in any house interior, particularly when combined with its high-quality range of veneers.

'We're delighted to now be supplying this exclusive range of kitchen doors and wall panels, which work brilliantly in combination with our veneers,' says Quasar MD, Alan Dickson. 'We particularly love the fact that the doors can be matched to existing veneers or can be used in contrast with them.'

'The Flame range features two different collections: one, which comes in three styles - planked, crown and quarter - and is available in sand, white, grey and black. The other, which comes in quarter style, is available in dark walnut, deep oak and grey oak. 'As such, you can easily see the many combinations that these colours can offer when used to match or contrast with our existing veneers.'

'Our kitchen doors are perfect for a wide range of purposes. If your kitchen is starting to feel a bit tired, for example, you could update your cabinets with doors from the Flame Range, which, as I say, can be mixed and matched with our veneers. 'All of our doors are made-to-measure, so they're ideal if you need a bespoke solution to fit your existing kitchen layout.'

Over the last year, Quasar customers from all over the island of Ireland have been visiting the state-of-the-art showroom at Shivers Business Park in Toomebridge, County Derry/Londonderry, in their droves. They've all been looking for that unique, special veneer that will bring a touch of class - mixed beautifully with complete functionality to their home.

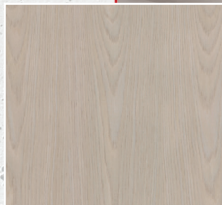

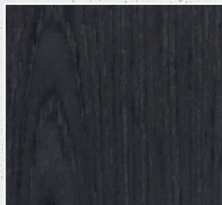

Now, those customers will be able to view the striking range of Flame doors, which are all on display in the showroom. Always conscious of customer service, however, Alan has plans to make viewing even simpler for customers....

'As a company,' he says, 'we've never been busier and our order books for the foreseeable future are looking extremely healthy, but we still want as many people as possible to see the terrific range of both veneers and doors that we have to offer. For that reason we've decided to seek expressions of interest from potential distributors throughout the island of Ireland. This will ensure that even more people will be able to enjoy all that Quasar has to offer!'
